Song of the Cynic

and every every every time I try to trust >I'm shattered the things I think I've come to love >are shaken loose and scattered the truth becomes a spiteful thing >a thing unnecessary and all the words I have to say seem cruel >and arbitrary

my safety lies in irony and vice and perfect >candor I'll not be cozened any more with tales >of virtue's grandeur for martyrs don't come back to life and there's no good >in dying and only children think that jumping off the roof >is flying

so run so run and let it all fall down around >my ears
it's not a world where courage counts >it hasn't been for years.

End
